Gabriele d'Annunzio's Plan to Get Divorce in Order to Marry Widowed Daughter of Ex-Premier di Rudini. Poet Adept at Game of Hears.

(STAFF CORRESPONDENT OF THE TIMES)

OME Nov. 8—it is beginning to look as if that erratic genius, Gabriele d'Annunzio, would be obliged to pay a visit to Dakota. Otherwise the distinguished poet and novelist who might be well described as the Lord Byron of Italy does not seem likely to succeed in his present undertaking, the object of which is to get a divorce from his wife.

D'Annunzio is anxious to marry another lady, the beautiful and wealthy Signora Carlotto, and until quite recently he thought he had it all arranged. Divorce is not sanctioned by Italian law, but the Swiss have more lenient laws, so a while ago, in all the papers announced at the time, d'Annunzio crossed the frontier and settled down in Lugano with the idea of taking out naturalization papers in Switzerland and thus being able to free himself of his present matrimonial bonds.

That plan might have worked if the author of "The Triumph of Death" had been an obscure individual instead of the foremost of Italian poets, and famous too, for his many and various romantic escapades on a par with the present one. As it is, however, the Swiss papers have taken the thing up, giving it a certain cattiness, being accosted when no one asks it, on the fact that the only object is a divorce, and now it is semi-officially announced that the Federal Council of the Republic will refuse d'Annunzio's application

Its object is not that the mother of his present wife, the Duchess di Gallesse, who, in her day, was among the loveliest women in Italy. D'Annunzio met her after the time when, as far as notice of 25 years back, he was the English poet whom in "Caro! La Vite," was recognized at once as a famous man.

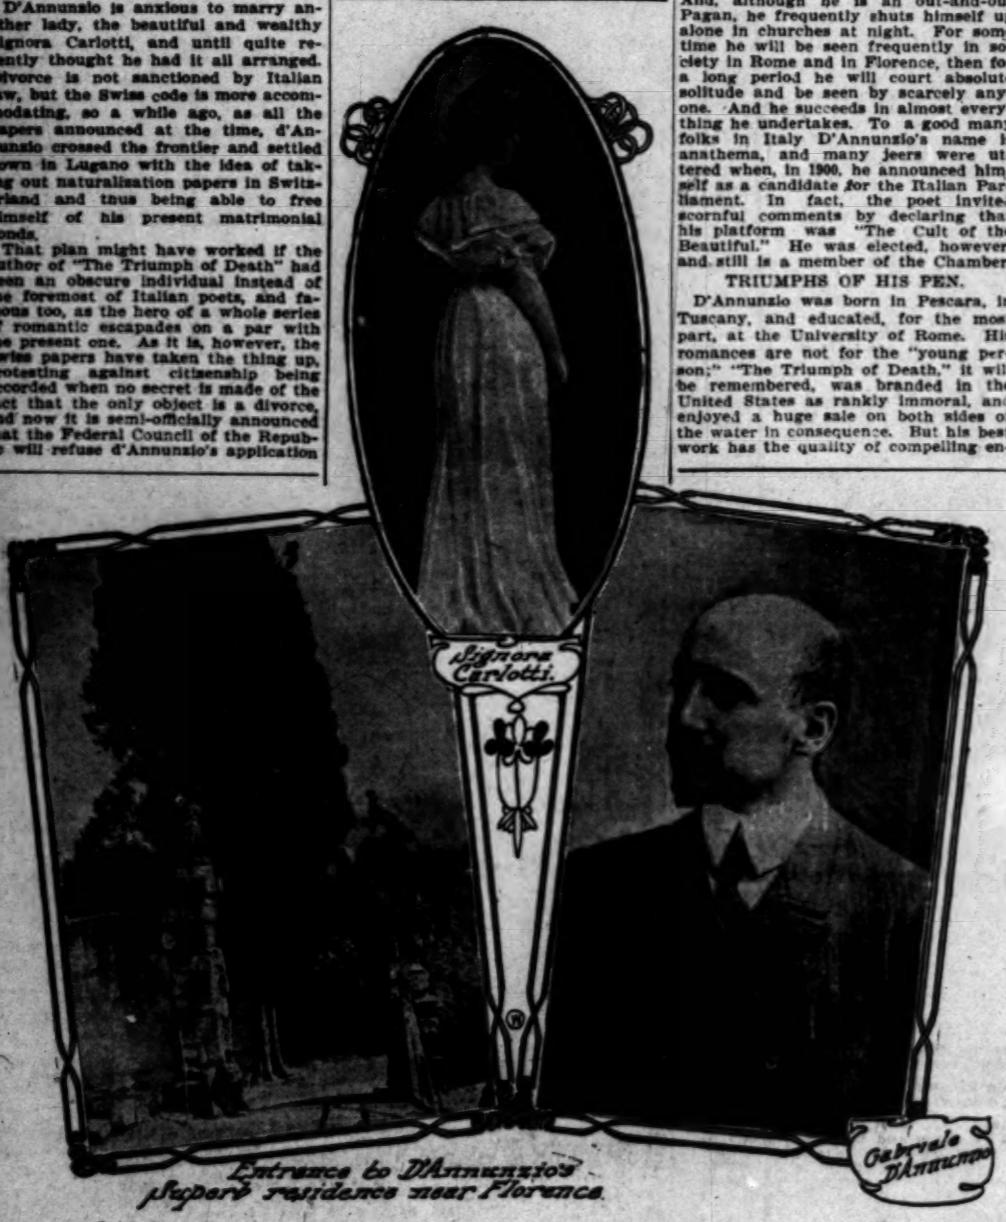

more beautiful actress, Irma Grammatica. In doing this, however, he went too far, Duse has not looked at him since.

LIVES ON SENSATIONS.

These and other "gallant" affairs with which D'Annunzio's career has been popularly identified, the campaign, of course, defended, can be explained in a way. The man makes a cult of life, just as Bernhardt makes one of death, and the greater part of his time is spent in seeking new sensations. From "La Cappuccina," his first mistress home near Florence, he wrote to a friend recently, "Here I labor, and I live, untroubling heavily the last two weeks." His friend, however, is puzzled; he has played many parts, that for instance, his identity hidden under a priest's costume, he often assumes about the name. Once he gained entrance to the peasants' huts to hear about their life from their own lips. In the hunting field near Rome he is, he proves, a tremendous worker when the inspiration is in him, sometimes like Balzac, he writes steadily and easily, at times, however, he infatuates him, and often he can be seen riding along the sands at dawn. And, although he is an out-and-out man, a frequent shirtless upshow in church, at night, for some time he will be seen frequently in society in Rome and in Florence, then for a long period he will court absolute solitude, having been a hermit for some time. And he succeeds in almost everything he undertakes. To a good many folks in Italy, D'Annunzio's name is synonymous with success, and were interested when, in 1909, he announced himself as a candidate for the Italian Parliament. In fact, the poet invited scornful comments by declaring that his preference was for "The Beautiful." He was elected, however, and still is a member of the Chamber.

TRIUMPHS OF HIS PEN.

D'Annunzio was born in Pescara, in Tuscany, and educated, for the most part, at the University of Rome. His romances are not for the young person; "The Triumph of Death" will be remembered, was branded in the United States as rankly immoral, and enjoyed a huge sale on both sides of the water in consequence. But his best work has the quality of compelling en-for citizenship on moral grounds. So much is the writer and his latest object of his desire to be popular that he goes to the trouble of visiting one of those Western States in which divorces are to be had for the asking, it is difficult to see how they are going to get married.

THE TALK OF ALL ITALY. As it is, the prospect of both parties in the affair has made it the talk of all Italy. Signora Carlotto, whose desire it is to become the second Mrs. d'Annunzio, is one of the best known, as well as one of the most beautiful women in Italian society. The widow of the rich Italian banker who is the only daughter of the Marquis di Rudini, the famous lady who was Prime Minister of Italy. Signora Carlotto and d'Annunzio met for the first time in 1909. They fell in love, and soon discovered that they were kindred spirits in several respects, notably that both were devoted to horseback riding. Their first meeting in a hotel company followed, with the result that the most susceptible literary man since Byron was speedily infatuated with his new acquaintance, and irresistibly as he is to the most virile woman, he had little difficulty in getting his affection returned.

As might have been expected, no expense was spared to render d'Annunzio's residence fit for the lady who, as it appears, bears d'Annunzio's name. The former Duchessa di Gallesse must have given up her impersonal, lost-as-an-orphan life to give a new, more personal touch behind him and his Signora in regretting that the Swiss authorities will not allow him in getting his divorce. Moreover, however, he has had other sectional difficulties in the affair. Luxurious surroundings and high living make the strongest kind of appeal to the Italian woman, who is credulous, and she is fond of fine dressing gowns, and in the course of entertaining him and showering gifts of one kind and another upon him, d'Annunzio's lady love has spent such sumptuous childhoods that mother and son are not complicated enough to attract him. The culminating point came one night when, according to the story in several circles, he had succeeded in getting her to Prima Sciarra. Since that episode the Duchessa and d'Annunzio have not even attempted to get on.

DUSE'S SAD EXPERIENCE. Duse, experience with d'Annunzio, has not much happier. For several years their names have coupled together, an association which they never dreamed of denying, and in the meantime the actress persisted in playing the poet's tragedies, to the undoubted detriment of her artistic reputation, and spent money freely in staging and bringing them out. In this way she said she dropped a million, to no reward, and by the time in a play, "Il Fuoco,"—"The Flame,"—having had her most intimate thoughts and acts held up to public gaze. The publication of the book, however, undoubtedly caused d'Annunzio to drop R. E. Duse, who was evidently too ill to stand the constant admirers, and it gave rise to a bitter quarrel with his heroine. The break, however, was made up after J.ville and d'Annunzio's "Daughter of Sorjor," as written.

They Stand Before Kings. The very wise King Solomon said that a man diligent in his business should stand before kings. A noted newspaper writer of the East quoted the Biblical phrase in connection with the fact that Duse R. E. Duse, a man who certainly was diligent in his profession, had failed to be fascinated by him. He is wonderfully, almost supernaturally, alive," wrote Robert Hichens of d'Annunzio. "Vitality streaks his form, and he moves few men more than he does his voice." Although as looks much older, the first of Italian poets and dramatists is only 48. His real name is Gastone Ragnotti, d'Annunzio being a nom-de-plume, which he assumed when he began to write.

His first affair of the heart with which gossip concerned itself had as work of genius, and since its publication the author has gone on from success to success. One of his tragedies, "La Morta" ("The City of the Dead"), she telephoned to the author. "Admirable, admirable, admirable!" and several of his friends in the theater play "La Gioconda," have become world-famous. "Francesca di Rimini," however, was not so great a success.

Commencing Sunday, October 1, 1929, and thereafter, the rate for Sunday "Liners" will be 1¢ per word for each line, minimum charge 25 cents, as at present. This slight advance is amply justified by the present Sunday circulation of The Times, which averaged over 60,000 copies. LARGEST CEMETERY.

New City of Dead to be at Inglewood, and Expected to Solve Question for Years.

A new cemetery, the largest in Los Angeles or vicinity, is about to be started at Inglewood by local capitalists.

All information is for the present withheld by the founders. It will, however, be formally put before the public in about two months.

It will comprise a large tract of land on the rolling prairies southwest of the city. It will solve the "cemetery question" for many years at least.

Among the large backlog of the new enterprise is the Hooper Realty Company, of which Mrs. Hooper is the head. She has been one of the principal investors in the city. K. P. Hooper of the Hooper Block is largely interested. There are other principals whose names have not been given out.

The profits of the other cemeteries are said to have been enormous, making fortunes for their proprietors.

BOLLEY DAY

ATIVE OF QUALITY
the boat was embelished with the country's exports of walnuts and the country's exports of walnuts.

The over formed the material for the construction of the famous Orange County Bridge, which crosses the Colorado River, and all was of community made.

peanut crop was represented by several companies covered with peanuts, and from his generous forth peanut vines. Pretend on this foot distributed about 100,000 bushels of Santa Ana nuts, which you should buy from the tuneful theater boys who are known as the peanut butchers. The told that Orange county presents the active principles of the system of the Pacific Electric; we can not promise more than this; it is the duty of the company to give you good service, and we shall do it.

ON THE FIELD. Chief among the afternoon attractions were the baseball and football matches at Athletic Park, which were by several hundred enthusiasts.

The Olinda Oil Wells nine defeated the Tufts-Lyon baseball team of Los Angeles to L. High School eleven, representing the Santa Ana High School and Co. L then took the field. The High School more than made up for its loss, however, and piled up a score of 22 to 2. The game was refereed by A. McFadden and umpired by Northcross.

In the afternoon the Columbia Club entertained with an informal dance at Armory Hall and in the evening with a grand ball.

A novel feature of the afternoon was an exhibition run by the Santa Ana Fire Department.

The many visitors lingering on the scene of the accident were entertained with an interesting open air drill by the Columbia Marching Club.

FITTING FINALE. As a fitting close to the whole celebration an elaborate banquet was served at 9 o'clock at the Roosevelt Hotel, the doors thrown open to the tables, the party including prominent city and county residents, officials of the Pacific Electric Railway Company, delegates from the Los Angeles Chamber of Commerce, the Los Angeles Merchants' and Manufacturers' Association, as well as from the various clubs of commerce of Orange county.

After the viands were disposed of, F. P. Nickey, president of the Santa Ana Chamber of Commerce, rang the banquet gong to open and introduce Thomas McKeever of Santa Ana as toastmaster of the evening. The following was the toast: "The President of the United States," S. M. Davis, "and the members of the Santa Ana Electric Light and Power Company, H. E. Complaint Against Conduct of McKinley Home.

Boys Compelled to Wear Pla-cards on Back.

To Be Brought to Attention of Board Today.

The directors of the McKinley Industrial Home will face an entirely new problem when it meets this afternoon.

The unusual question for them to solve will be with reference to the proper discipline for a boy suffering from a physical infirmity. There are about twenty boys in the home, scattered from the four corners of the earth, of all colors and nationalities, and ranging in age from probably 9 to 16 years.

They are all orphans or half-orphans, and even if all were of the most careful parentage and healthful, it would be but the natural thing that some of them should show a disposition common in children, that causes much annoyance in the dormitory.

There are a half dozen or more of this kind among the six dozen boys in the McKinley Home, and Mrs. Robinson, the plan of tying a placard on the back of the helpless offender, proclaiming to his fellow-students to his playmates on the campus and to visitors who happen to look in, the nature of his offense.

The humiliating placard was applied to the back of Leslie Pembroke last evening, and the boy has been sent to the home for five years. He bore the taunts of the other boys for half a day and then deserted the home and walked away, and was found and arrested at the home of his uncle, Floyd P. Lewis, with the placard in his possession. Mr. Lewis will attend the board meeting to-morrow and present the complaint. He also says he will make a complaint to the County Board of Education, on the ground that the boy was deprived of the privileges of the home because unless he wore the hateful placard.

When a reporter of the Times visited the McKinley Home yesterday he found a number of boys on the playground from the entrance through the memorial arch, and saw a boy in the furthermost corner, with a suspicious spark in his eye.

The reporter asked the administration building, the reporter circled the grounds and sought out the boy in question, and found that he was one of the mischievous little fellows who said his name was Earl Dunn. When asked why he wore the placard he gave a cheerful and candid answer to the question:

"Do you think it does you any good?" he was asked.

"No," he said.

"But you want it to?"

"Yes."

He went on with his play, and when another boy passed by and taunted him with the placard, the card was held no attention and appeared not to notice it. This boy probably has no place to run to, and is philosopher enough to realize that the punishment inflicted upon him for something he cannot avoid, for he showed not the slightest evidence of remorse.

Mrs. Robinson stated that the placards were placed on the boys by her order, but she vigorously denied that she had any hand in the affair. She said the boys so afflicted, had the habit of hiding their soiled night-clothing and bedding while they lay up in the dormitory, so as to be compelled to wash and change their clothes as soon as possible. She said the punishment provided for them, and it was her opinion that the placard has been.

When asked if there were other boys in the home besides Leslie Pembroke, who were so afflicted, Mrs. Robinson said that she had not been able to determine if any of the boys had been entirely accidental that she had to name Earl Dunn, until asked directly about the boy who was at that time in the playground wearing the placard.

The theory of punishment in order to effect a cure of any such childish infirmity is that it will act as a discipline upon the subject, and if it is inflicted as punishment for hiding evidence of the infirmity, none of the boys will be likely to repeat the offense yesterday, so understood it. But this may have been owing to some consciousness of intellect, or inability to speak directly of Leslie Pembroke, the boy who ran away on account of this mode of punishment. Mrs. Robinson said that she had not been able to determine if any of the boys had been entirely accidental that she had to name Earl Dunn, until asked directly about the boy who was at that time in the playground wearing the placard.

Twice operated upon by the foremost surgeon of the United States; paralyzed throughout the entire left side of his brain and limbs, and en route to his home at Bakerfield, Griffith Mansfield regained consciousness in the Griffith Hospital last evening, with the first thought for a $3 cane which he had bought for $2 canes which he had fallen and fell senseless at Fifth and Main streets.

Wilson was locked up originally on a charge of drunkenness preferred by a police officer, and was held under arrest at Second and Spring streets.

When searched, however, it was found that he was armed with a pistol and revolver.

The mystery surrounding the case of the recent hold-up in which the persons assaulted have been slugged may find solution when Wilson's case is further investigated.

It is believed that he is older than he represents himself to be.

HAVANA POLICE SEIZE RIFLES.

HAVANA, Nov. 22.—Sixty Remington rifles were seized by the police last night in a raid on a house near San Juan de Martines, province of Pinar del Rio, in which fifty anti-government revolutionaries were captured, the latter being dispersed by the Salt Lake Railroad Company, and after eleven years of litigation our title to it was validated by the highest court.

It is the first time our ownership of this strip of land has been validated by the highest court.

The strip of land is owned by the government engineers before it was covered that Concessions made no application to carry out the work.

On the ocean side of this strip lies a narrow tongue of land extending inward from the outer harbor. It is not more than 100 feet wide at the end, and is crooked as to be useless for navigation, being a small craft.

The plan originally laid down by the government engineers before it was covered that Concessions made no application to carry out the work was to cut an inner harbor by dredging out practically all of the 100 acres of flats owned by the Salt Lake Railroad Company, and after eleven years of litigation our title to it was validated by the highest court.

The strip of land is owned by the government engineers before it was covered that Concessions made no application to carry out the work.

On the ocean side of this strip lies a narrow tongue of land extending inward from the outer harbor. It is not more than 100 feet wide at the end, and is crooked as to be useless for navigation, being a small craft.

The plan originally laid down by the government engineers before it was covered that Concessions made no application to carry out the work was to cut an inner harbor by dredging out practically all of the 100 acres of flats owned by the Salt Lake Railroad Company, and after eleven years of litigation our title to it was validated by the highest court.

It is the first time our ownership of this strip of land has been validated by the highest court.
